Dorothy Dix Talks

TO HUSBANDS AND FATHERS.

By DOROTHY DIX, The World's Highest Paid Woman Writer

Attention Mr. Husband and Father! These few lines are written especially for you. Please read them.

Have you made your will? And if you have made it, have you tied up whatever money you are leaving your wife and daughter in some sort of a fool-proof trust, so that they can neither spend it, nor give it away, nor be cheated out of it?

If you have not done this you have committed a crime against those who are dependent upon you and who look to you, and have a right to look to you, to defend them against a world that is hard and cruel to penniless women.

If you have not done this, go this very day to your lawyer and make your will, and leave your property in trust to your wife and daughters.

Many men put off making their wills because they hate to face the thought of death. This is puerile cowardice. The one certain thing in an uncertain world is death. It is bound to come to each one of us, and the most comforting thought to any man can have when he comes to lie his head on the pillow for the last time is that he is leaving those he loves safeguarded against want.

If there is a hell it can have no worse torment than the remorse a man must suffer if, after death, his spirit can visit the earth and see his poor, helpless old wife eating the bitter bread of dependence, and his tenderly reared daughters battling hopelessly against poverty because he was too stupid and careless to make a will settling the money he left them in such a way that they could not lose it.

I repeat again with all the emphasis and earnestness of which I am capable, Mr. Husband and Father make a will and leave your wife's and daughters' property in trust so that they cannot touch the principal.

Fifty years hence when women have gone into business, and every girl is brought up to follow some gainful occupation, women as a class may know how to handle money and it may be safe to leave them their property outright, but at the present time they lack this knowledge, and it is not safe to leave it to them unsecured.

Every man knows this. He knows that he wouldn't trust his wife to handle his business or decide on his investments. Then why does he think that his death will work some sort of a miracle in her that will inspire her with sufficient financial acumen to handle his estate when he is gone?

Of course no such miracle occurs, and the familiar tragedy that you have seen happen to a dozen of your friends' families will happen to your own. Mr. Husband and Father, unless you are wiser than your friends were, think of how often a little scene like this happens: You are seated at your desk and your office boy comes in and says that Mrs. A wants to see you. She comes in, a pathetic shabby little creature in black, with hair that is suddenly gone gray, a figure that seems to have shriveled up all at once, and a face that has lost all of its jolly middle-aged prettiness. You look once into the haggard, desperate eyes and swallow hard, and haven't the courage to meet them again.

For Mrs. A is the widow of your old friend. Many is the good dinner you've eaten in her beautiful home. Many is the jolly ride you've taken in her automobile, for A was a rich man, and when he died his family came into a comfortable pot of money.

But they haven't a cent now, somehow, the whole fortune slipped through Mrs. A's fingers. Bad investments, reckless extravagance, people who cheated her, relatives who borrowed and couldn't pay back. Same old story, and Mrs. A has come to you to ask you if you won't help her to get some work, something whereby she can support herself.

What can you say to her. What can you do for her? What, in all this busy world that demands good and competent work, can a middle-aged woman who has never been trained to any occupation do?

She's too old to learn new tricks. She lacks the strength and stamina to do manual labor. She's handicapped by the habits of luxury and ease of half a century of rich living. She lacks alertness and high spirits, the brightness and charm that makes people want to have young girls about them.

You would be only too glad to make a place for her in your office if you could, but there's absolutely nothing that she is capable of doing, and so you tell her some polite lie, and hold out a few vague promises that you'll try to get her off, because you are thinking, what if you were dead, and that was your poor old wife going like a beggar from door to door, and you cannot bear the thought of it.

Or perhaps it is A's young daughter that you run across in a store, sagged back utterly exhausted against the shelves. She looks so thin, worn and tired—and she's just the age of your blooming Betty, who is dancing through the picnic time of life.

And then you curse A for his stupidity in not having left his property to those fool women couldn't beggar themselves. Yet very likely you are doing the same thing that A did, and your family may come to the same end.

I do not need to tell you, Mr. Husband and Father, that there are men who are human ghouls, who amass fortunes by preying on widows and orphans. You know that these men come to women in the guise of religion, of friends, even of relatives to ruthlessly rob them.

You can cite a dozen widows whom you personally know, who have been induced by the deacons in their churches to invest their all in phony stocks, or to back scheme so transparently fraudulent that the promoters would never have dared to propose them to a man. You have seen the sudden affection that Cousin Thomas develops for poor Mary until he borrows all of poor Mary's money without any security.

You know that women consider a good investment the one that pays the biggest interest without reference to its stability. You know that women will sign any document without reading or understanding it, because it seems to them discourteous to be suspicious, and what does a little thing like writing your name amount to, anyway?

Mr. Husband and Father you can't make women over much as they may need it and much as you might like to. But you can protect your own wife and daughters from their own folly in money matters, and save them from starvation and want by tying up what you leave them in trust, so that they will get only the interest in sums small enough for them to know how to handle.

As for leaving your daughters' property in trust so that their husbands can't spend it, and the girls can't give it to them, remember this—the right sort of a husband will be glad for his wife's property to be settled on her so that she will be safe no matter what happens to him. And if he's the wrong sort of a husband, the wife especially needs to have her money so tied up by law that her husband can't get his greedy hands on it.

Make your will today Mr. Husband and Father. And leave your money to your wife and daughters in trust.

ROOSEVELT URGES GIVING OF MONEY

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., April 2.—An appeal to the American people to "back the Liberty loan to the limit" was made here yesterday by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in an address to a delegation of Liberty loan workers who had made a pilgrimage to his Sagamore Hill estate.

"If we do not win now, fighting abroad beside our allies, then sooner or later our sons and grandsons will have to fight here at home, without allies, for their home, their wives and their little ones," said Colonel Roosevelt.

"A loan does not float itself," he continued. "No government work does itself. Somebody has to do it. I appeal to the people to back up to the limit their power. This is the people's war. It is America's war. It is a war for our children and our children's children's welfare."

"Each of us should gladly and cheerfully sacrifice everything necessary in order to win. The man at the front stands ready to sacrifice life and limb and health for our dear land. We who are not given the high privilege of going to the front, must at least back him to the limit with the work of head and hand."

ORDER ISSUED TO MOBILIZE MEDICOS

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Orders were issued today for the mobilization at Seattle for the enlisted personnel of Base Hospital Number fifty formed at the University of Washington and the transfer of the unit to Camp Fremont, Palo Alto, Cal. Major-General B. E. Eagleson of the medical reserve corps will be in command.

INTERRED SAILORS SENT AWAY FROM SALT LAKE

Salt Lake Tribune: Veiled by the secrecy that characterizes all important military movements in the country, the 520 sailors and officers of the German ships Cormoran and Geier, which were interned at Fort Douglas, have been transferred to the war prison camp at Fort McPherson, Ga., and are now safely lodged in the big naval prison camp at that place.

So carefully guarded were all movements in connection with the transfer of the Germans from the local to the Georgia camp that few persons outside of official circles knew when the prisoners left Salt Lake, and no one outside of the officials and those taken into their confidence knew where they were going.

Loaded into street cars at Fort Douglas, the prisoners were taken through the heart of Salt Lake in the middle of the day, were transferred to a special train at a local depot and sent on their way without the general public knowing that anything of an unusual nature was taking place beneath their very noses.

The prisoners were nearly all attired in civilian clothing, hence their identity was not recognized, except by a few as they passed through the crowded streets. A few people gathered at the depot when the prisoners were transferred from the cars to the train and gazed in inquiring wonder at the proceedings.

Orders to transfer all the naval prisoners from the Fort Douglas camp to the general naval camp at Fort McPherson were received at local prison headquarters about a week ago. The matter was kept a profound secret and no one suspected that anything was about to happen. Not even the prisoners knew exactly what was going to happen. They were told to prepare for a long railroad trip.

In the meantime arrangements were made for a special train to carry the Germans to their new prison home, and shortly after noon last Friday, with their baggage and personal belongings, the 520 officers and sailors formed in ranks and marched under military guard from the gates of the Fort Douglas prison to eight street cars that awaited them just outside the compound.

The 300 or more civilian enemy aliens interned in one section of the camp became highly excited over the movement and burst forth into a vigorous rendition of the German national anthem. They didn't know where the sailors were going or what for. They didn't know why they should sing, but they seemed to think it was up to them to sing a German song. Their music hadn't progressed far, however, when the officer of the day quietly informed them that their turn might come next, and if it did they would probably be sent direct into Germany.

The information had magic effect upon the noisy patriotic demonstration. The strains of the German national anthem died away in echoes from the hills. There was silence. Then, as if trying to ward off a terrible fate, they burst vigorously forth in the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

In a long line the cars bearing the German sailors wound their way from the fort through the heart of the city and to the depot. From the cars the Germans were unloaded upon the street in double rank, stretching for nearly a block.

The prisoners carried with them rations sufficient for the trip, and their meals were prepared and served on the cars by their own cooks. The soldier guards by their own mess and provisions.

Segregate Prisoners. The German officers were placed in two special cars by themselves, and there was a special car for the military commander of the train and his assistants.

Just what the removal of the naval prisoners of war from the Fort Douglas camp and the leaving the civilian enemy aliens means is not officially known, though it is believed it means the conversion of the local camp into an exclusive prison for civilian enemy aliens. It is understood that the government has found it better to concentrate the military and naval prisoners of war in separate camps by themselves, and that it will be the policy to have the enemy aliens held in one camp by themselves.

SEC. BAKER SEES ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Monday, April 1.—(By The Associated Press.)—The American secretary of war, Newton D. Baker, accompanied by the members of his staff, arrived at the Italian headquarters this morning. He was joined here by Ambassador Thomas N. Page, who came from Rome, and Major General Eben Swift, the head of the American military mission to Italy.

The party proceeded to the supreme command, where a handsome villa was placed at the disposal of the American secretary of war. Mr. Baker and Mr. Page called on General Diaz, the secretary remaining for an extended talk with the Italian commander in chief.

General Diaz entertained Secretary Baker, Ambassador Page and General Swift at luncheon. The conference gave opportunity for an agreeable exchange of views, in which General Diaz spoke in high terms of the American troops and Ambassador Page referred to the strong bonds of friendship existing between America and Italy and the desire of the United States to do everything which would contribute to the winning of the common cause.

Delayed by Weather.

General Diaz desired to conduct Secretary Baker along the Piave river and mountain fronts, but the weather conditions did not permit it.

This afternoon Secretary Baker and Ambassador Page met the Duke of Oosta, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, at the headquarters of the Italian Third army, and later proceeded to Venice, where they saw the extensive destruction caused by Teuton air raids and the admirable relief work directed by B. H. Carroll, the American consul at Venice, and the American Red Cross. Mr. Baker and Mr. Page departed tonight for Rome.

VENICE, Monday, April 1.—(By The Associated Press.)—The desolate condition of Venice, left so by the evacuation of two-thirds of its population and the destruction of many of the churches and buildings by aerial bombardments, was witnessed today by Newton D. Baker, the American secretary of war.

Mr. Baker and Thomas Nelson Page, the American ambassador, had stopped at the headquarters of the Third Italian army on their way to Venice to call on the Duke of Aosta, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel and commander of the Italian forces on the Piave line. The meetings between the duke and Mr. Baker were most cordial, the duke personally explaining to the American secretary the present military situation and the outlook.

Conveyed to Venice. Admiral Marzolo, naval commandant of Venice, sent his chief of staff and the admiral's barge to convey the American party to the city.

The trip was through the Venetian lagoons, which afforded a view of the region flooded by the Italian military engineers in order to hold back the enemy's advance. Arriving at Venice, Mr. Baker and Ambassador Page were escorted to the admiral's headquarters. The party then passed through the Grand canal to the Place San Marco and to the city council chamber, where the mayor of Venice, Count Grimani, with the prefect and members of the municipality, extended the welcome of the city. Count Grimani's address was a warm tribute to the United States and an acknowledgment of America's part in assisting Venice during the recent critical period.

Later, Mr. Baker and party visited the Doges' palace, the Campanile and the Basilica of San Marco.

The secretary noted the defensive armor of sandbags with which all these world monuments were covered. He also went through the interior of the Doges' palace, now stripped of most of its precious paintings and presenting the appearance of a citadel.

Regarding his impressions of Italy, Secretary Baker authorized the following statement:

"I have been deeply interested in the military activity of the Italian army, and regret that fog prevented my seeing the marvelous engineering works constructed by them in the rugged mountain country through which their line runs. Nothing could exceed the hospitality with which my visit has been received, and it has been made possible for me to see a great deal in a short time."

"The relations between the Italian army and the people and the Americans here is most sympathetic and cordial, and it gave me pleasure to express the appreciation of America for the splendid loyalty of Italy to the common cause and to reciprocate the warm sentiments expressed everywhere for America and Americans."

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

parking and vivacious—men, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nervous wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation.—Advertisement.

Back Lame and Achy Every Morning?

It's hard to have to start off every day with a lame, aching back, but you can expect little peace if your kidneys are weak. While at first there may be nothing more serious than backache, headaches, dizzy spells and kidney irregularities, the longer you delay helping the kidneys the more danger there is of worse troubles, such as dropsy, gravel, arterial hardening, heart trouble, or Bright's disease. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They are helping thousands. You can believe what home people say about them.

These Are Ogden Cases:

Geo. B. Oknam, 2847 Grant Ave., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills on different occasions and they have always greatly benefited me. Sometimes my kidneys have become weak and bothered me. My back has been lame and sore at those times, too. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I get at Marshall's Drug Store have always given me quick relief from that trouble."

W. J. Law, 3077 Washington Ave., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills on different occasions in the past several years and they have always been satisfactory in every way. When my back has been weak or lame, or my kidneys, have acted too freely, I have used a box or so of Doan's Kidney Pills and they have never failed to cure the attack."
